SPEAKER BIO:

Martin Neal PPG Coating Innovation Center

Martin Neal is a Chemist at PPG at the Coating Innovation Center location in Allison Park. He has been with the company for 2 years working within the powder coatings research team, focusing on projects involving improving the single coat corrosion properties of a variety of powder coatings systems. Prior to joining PPG, Martin taught both Chemistry and Physics for several years in a high school outside of Winder, Georgia. He holds a BS in Chemical Engineering from the University of Alabama, and a MA in Secondary Education from Piedmont College. In addition to working full time, Martin is currently pursuing a Ph.D. in small-molecule organic synthesis and computational chemistry at Duquesne University.

ABSTRACT:

New Innovations In Powder Coatings: PPG Envirocron® Extreme Protection Edge Technology for Advanced Corrosion Performance

Forming metal parts through cutting or stamping processes creates sharp edges from which coatings flow away from. This results in little to no protective coating on these edges leading to premature corrosion. With PPG Envirocron® Extreme Protection Edge technology, PPG's Powder Coatings researchers have established a new benchmark for corrosion protection of sharp metal edges with a one-coat, direct-to-metal powder coating. PPG's multi-faceted approach relies on both electrostatic and rheology control to maintain a uniform film build on laser-cut edges throughout the curing process. Providing excellent corrosion protection in rigorous salt spray, cyclic corrosion, and field trials. While outlining the journey taken by PPG's formulation team to achieve this technology, we will provide additionally insight into the field of powder coatings and the innovation process at PPG.

PRESIDENTS MESSAGE

Dear PSCT Members,

Thank you to Mark W. Ellsworth, Ph.D. from Color Corporation of America for presenting on Transparent Water-Borne Pigment Dispersions. It humbles me at times to realize how much goes into common stains and coatings that continuously improve. In the reverse order, it is like looking back at a picture of ourselves 10 years ago, not noticing the slight changes time has on our appearance until we see that photo. Fortunately, for each wrinkle, a bit of wisdom has been gained internally.

For those with no wrinkles working towards gaining wisdom, the scholarship application is due MARCH 15. Please try to encourage those that qualify to take advantage of this monetary aid to help them with their studies. The application can be found on the website.

We are cautiously optimistic to be offering a Spring Social this May. Assuming conditions allow, a wine tasting paired with dinner will be held at the Mighty Oak Barrel in Oakmont, stay tuned for further updates.

For our March meeting, we are excited to have Martin Neal from PPG, who will be speaking on Innovations in Powder Coatings. Please try and invite a colleague, customer or supplier to either join us online or in person at Rolands Seafood Grill. Either way, I look forward to seeing everyone very soon.

Chris Chaousy

PSCT President 2020-2021
